OFFICIAL PAPERS.

ARMY OF ITALY.

Crossing the Minico—battle of Borghetto—Capture of the fortress of Peschiera, and of the magazines of Castelnuova.

Buonaparte, general in chief of the army of Italy, to the Executive Directory.

Head-Quarters, Peschiera, 13th Prairial, 4th year, (June 1.)

Citizen Directors,

After the battle of Lody, Beaulieu crossed the Oglio and Minico: he inclined his right to the Lake of Garda—His left on Mantua, and erected batteries on all the angles of this line, in order to defend the passage of the Minico.

Head-Quarters were established on the 9th at Brescia. I ordered general of division, Kilmaine, to march with 15000 cavalry, and six battalions of grenadiers, to Desinzanno, and general Ruseau, with a half brigade of light infantry to Lalo. My intention was to induce Beaulieu to believe that I wanted to turn his flank by the upper part of the lake, to cut off the road of Tyrol on the side of Riva. I kept all the divisions of the army in the rear, insomuch that my right, with which I really meant to attack him, was only one day and a half's march from the enemy. I then placed the army behind the river Chenisa, where it appeared to be on the defensive, whilst General Kilmaine advanced to the posts of Peschiera, and daily had some skirmishes with the advanced posts of the enemy, in one of which the Austrian general Lieptay was killed.

On the 10th the division of general Angereau relieved that of general Kilmaine, which retrograded to Lonado, and arrived that evening at Castiglionna. Gen. Massena was then at Mount Chearo, and Gen. Serrurier at Montze. At 2 o'clock, A. M. all the divisions were in motion, directing their march towards Borghetto, where I had determined to cross the Minico. The enemy's van guard, consisting of 3 or 4000 infantry, and of 1800 horse, defended the approach of Borghetto. Our cavalry, on a slow trot, flanked and followed by our carabineers and grenadiers, charged them with much bravery, put the enemy's cavalry in disorder, and took from them a piece of artillery. The enemy then crossed the bridge, demolishing one of the arches. The light infantry immediately engaged. We were endeavoring with much difficulty to mend it under the fire of the enemy's battteries. When about 50 grenadiers, with Gen. Gardenne, a grenadier in height as well as courage, at their head, threw themselves in the river, the water being up to their chins, holding their muskets over their heads. The enemy believing they saw the dreadful column that attacked them at the bridge of Lody, flew. The bridge was mended with ease—Our Grenadiers instantly passed the Minico, and possessed themselves of Valeggio, the head quarters of Beaulieu, who had just left it. However, the enemy staggered and partly routed, were drawn up in order of battle between Valeggio and Villa Franca, but we took good care not to follow them. They appeared to rally, and their batteries were increased and moved towards us. This was exactly what I wished—I had much ado to contain the impatience, or rather the fury of the grenadiers.

In the mean time gen. Angereau crossed the Mincio—he had orders to move towards Peschiera, following the banks of this river, and cut off the passes of the Tyrol from the enemy.—Beaulieu, and the wrecks of his army, would then have been completely surrounded without a possibility of retreating. In order to prevent the enemy from perceiving the movement of Gen. Angereau, I caused them to be vigorously cannonaded from Veleggio; but being instructed by their patroles, of Gen. Angereau's march, the enemy filed towards the road of Castlenuova. A reinforcement of cavalry joined them at the same time, and enabled them to protect their retreat. Our cavalry, commended by Gen. Murat, did wonders—This general himself disengaged several of our light infantry, whom the enemy were about making prisoners. The chief of brigade of the 10th regiment of light infantry has equally distinguished himself. Gen. Angereau arrived at Peschiera, found the place evacuated by the enemy.

On the 12th at break of day we marched to Rivoli; but the enemy had already crossed the Adigeo, and broken down all the bridges. The loss of the enemy, on this day, is computed at 1500 men, and 500 horses killed and taken prisoners. Among the latter is Prince de Contlo, lieutenant general of the armies of the King of Naples, and commander in chief of the Neapolitan cavalry. We have also taken five pieces of cannon, two twelve and three six pounders and seven or eight covered waggons, loaded with military stores. We found magazines at Castlenuova, of which a part was already consumed by fire. General of division, Kilmaine, had a horse wounded under him.

Thus are the Austrians totally expelled Italy. Our advanced posts are on the mountains of Germany. I will not mention the men who have distinguished themselves by their bravery—to do this it would be necessary to name every grenadier and carabineer of the van-guard—they all defy and laugh at death—They are now well used to meet cavalry, which they despise—nothing equals their courage unless it is the gaiety with which they undergo repeated forced marches—You would naturally suppose, that, arrived at the places destined for their rest, they would at least seek to enjoy some repose——but no, they amuse themselves by surmising and planning the operations of the next day, and some of them often think very justly. The other day, whilst seeing a half brigade filing off, a light infantry man approached me and said, "General, we must do so and so"—"Sir, cried I, will you be silent?" and he instantly disappeared. I have since endeavoured to find him (for what he hinted was exactly what I had ordered) but I sought in vain.

Buonaparte, general in chief of the army of Italy, to the Executive Directory.

Head-quarters Peschiera, 13th Prairial, (June 1, 4th year.

Citizen Directors,

I send you enclosed a copy of a manifesto I published on entering the Venetian territories.

The republic of Venice had suffered Peschiera, which is a strong place, to be occupied by the Imperialists! but thanks to the victory of Borghetto; we have possession of it, and I now write to you from this city.

General Massena occupies with his division Verona * a handsome and large city, where there are two bridges on the Adigeo.

* The late residence of Louis XVIII.

Buonaparte, general in chief of the army of Italy, to the republic of Venice.

Brescia, 10 Prairial, 4th year.

It is in order to deliver the finest part of Europe from the iron sway of the ambitious house of Austria, that the French army has overcome the most difficult obsticles—Victory joining in hand with justice, has crowned its efforts. The remains of the enemy's army have retreated beyond the Minico. The French army passes on the territories of Venice to pursue them—But it will be remembered that friendship has long united the two republics.—Religion, government, customs, and property, all shall be respected—Let the people be not uneasy: the most severe discipline shall be maintained—and all that shall be furnished to the army, shall be strictly paid in specie.

The general in chief requests the officers of the republic, the magistrates and the priests, to make known his sentiments to the people, that mutual confidence may cement the friendship which has so long united the two nations.

Faithful to the path of honor as that of victory, the French soldier is only terrible to the enemies of his liberty, and of his country.

Extract of a letter from Inspruck (in Germany) 16 May.

Within a few weeks past, the TIROL has been the route of the troops from Germany and Austria, for the reinforcement of the army in Italy; they were very much astonished to meet there the sad remains of that army with whom they expected to share their laurels, totally dispersed, without any order: these movements, equally unexpected as extraordinary, have created a most vivid sensation in the minds of the inhabitants, a part of whom did not credit the defeat of Beaulieu.

Nevertheless, recruiting for men to drag the field pièces, is continued with the same spirit, each man receives from 50 to 60 florins (German.) They are about entrusting them with murdering air-guns, invented in the reign of Joseph II. which he made use of with the greatest success, in the last war against the Turks.

This carabine, lighter and smaller than the smaller ones, is composed of 2 barrels, the smallest of which contains 25 balls; and by a slight movement, they pass from one to another into the receptacle made for them; which balls, by lowering the firelock, goes off with the same rapidity, and carries further than if fired with powder, without the least noise, and that as often as a hundred times alternately, during the space of 8 or 10 minutes; after which the reservoir being exhausted, it requires to pump in fresh air, which takes up at most, 16 minutes.

Count Louis Staremberg, minister from his imperial majesty at the court of St. James's presented the prince of Wales with one of those carabines, by which means the English may avail themselves, and make use of them in the Indies, as well as at sea; the damp weather never putting them out of order.

LONDON, MAY 23.

The KING of GREAT-BRITAIN'S PROCLAMATION

For dissolving the present Parliament, and calling a new one.

GEORGE REX.

Having thought it proper, with the advice of our privy council, to dissolve the present parliament, which remains now prorogued to the 5th of July next, we have for this effect made public this our royal Proclamation; and the said parliament is hereby dissolved. The lords spiritual and temporal, knights, citizens, and burgesses, and the representatives for counties and burghs are therefore excused from meeting on Tuesday the 5th of July. It being our desire and resolution to meet our people and have their advice in parliament as soon as possible: We hereby make known to all our lovin g subjects, our royal will and pleasure, to convoke a new parliament; declaring also, that by the advice of our privy council, we have this day given orders to our chancellor of Great Britain, to expedite writs in form for calling a new parliament, to bear date the 21st of May inst. and be of force on Tuesday the 12th of July next.

God Save the King.

The coach in which his majesty rode to the House of peers, was a sort of moveable fortress, constructed in a manner sufficient to resist every species of attack, and so hermetically closed up, as to conceal the monarch from the view of his faithful subjects.

The king has created fifteen new peers, and two earls—admiral Hood and Bridport are in the number of the first.

Extract of General Jourdan's answer to the Arch-duke Charles, taken from the Journal of Anvers.

"Butchers, you wish then for more human blood! Well, monster, against my will I will cause it to be shed.—I will only attack you once—but the valor of Frenchmen will strike with astonishment the four quarters of the world—you shall pay to the troops whom I command, the tribute of your barbarity!"

This high-flown message has too much the appearance of boasting to induce us to believe it general Jourdan's. It is neither the style nor the thought of a commander, confident of his own courage and the valor of his troops—it is the gigantic bombast of a bashaw, endeavouring to inspire terror with empty threats. When Darius went to enter Scythia, the king of the barbarians sent him five arrows, a frog, a mouse, and a bird; an answer which the great king found terrible; had he written him a letter, says Rousseau, the more threatening it had been, the less would Darius have been afraid; he would only have laughed at it.

The Archduke Charles would no doubt laugh at being treated as a butcher by the general of a nation, which may reproached with having shed but too much blood. Those who gallantly fight us in arms are not butchers, they are our enemies; let us be satisfied with conquering them, and let us not insult them. It would appear that our generals have not so good secretaries as soldiers.

ROME, MAY 14.

Four plenipotentiaries of his holiness, accompanied by the Spanish ambassador, have just set out from here. It is presumed two of them are going to Paris to negociate a peace—the two others are to treat with general Buonaparte for a suspension of arms. The last are the senators Rezzonico, and Marquis Massimi. His holiness has issued an edict forbidding any emigration from his dominions.—Every hour some couriers arrive; they are sent by the governors of the towns on the frontiers, and the senators and magistrates of different provinces, to receive the pope's orders respecting the conduct they are to observe in the present critical situation of Italy. The senate held on the 10th, a meeting at Bologne, but what was resolved, is not yet known. On the 12th, the senators Malvasia and Caprara, and the consulter of the senate, Postorini, set out in a carriage with four horses—they took the road to Modene, probably to meet the French general. A courier was at the same time dispatched to Rome to the ambassador of the senate, who immediately had a long audience with the pope.

FREBOURG, MAY 13.

Extract of a Dispatch from Field-marshall Count de Wurmser, to the Helvetic Body at Basle.

"GENTLEMEN,

"Your answer of the 26th April, is by no means calculated to remove my uneasiness respecting the preservation of the line of neutrality, my suspicions are so much the more grounded, that since that time I have learnt the French have formed a camp in the environs of Brundruth, without your having deigned any way to oppose it. The important post I am entrusted with, obliges me to require for my own security, other guarantees besides writings; for the enemy in the enthusiasm of their success in Italy, will soon think themselves allowed, if it favors their design, to break the neutrality especially when there will be no other barrier to oppose them but indeterminate words. I therefore request you gentlemen, and for the last time, to gather on the frontiers means sufficient to repulse force by force; without which I shall take all the severe measures which circumstances shall require."

Extract of a letter from Basle, May 28.

"Our situation becomes every day more and more alarming; the troops which our Cantons have sent are returning in great numbers into our city which has rendered it necessary to form three camps in the environs.

"The magistrates, in compliance with field-marshall Wurmser's request has sent an express to the French general to desire him not to go beyond the limits of their frontiers, that hostilities might be avoided; the Swiss being constrained to oppose the most active resistance to the least insult. The French generals returned a very polite answer, assuring the Helvetic body, they might rely on the strict observance of the neutrality; that those collections of men had no other end in view than to prevent smuggling, and cause the imposts to be regularly paid on the frontier."

P. S. As the courier departs, the mail from Italy arrives; report circulates, that the city of Mantua has surrendered to the French by capitulation.

Lands for Sale.

THAT valuable and well known tract of Land in Loudoun County, called the Long Glade, whereon Joel White lived for several years, and lying on the main road, leading from the town of Alexandria to Leesburg, being twenty two miles from the former, eighteen miles from George-Town and the Federal city, and about three miles from the Great Falls of Potowmac, where a new Town has been laid out, and considerable improvements already made. This tract contains thirteen hundred and twenty seven acres, is well timbered, the soil of an excellent quality for farming, and has a large proportion of fine meadow ground. There is a never failing stream of water running thro' this with a good mill seat on it. It is clear of all incumbrances, and an indisputeable title will be made to the purchaser, who, by paying a part of the purchase money in hand, may have a long credit, and easy payments, for the ballance, for terms apply to Col. IMPORTANT. PLEASING. AUTHENTIC.

THE WESTERN POSTS TAKEN POSSESSION OF.

Extract of a Letter from Capt. James Bruff to the Secretary of War, dated Fort Oswego or Ontario, July 15, 1796.

"I have the pleasure to announce that the British commandant of Fort Ontario wrote to me on the 13th inst. that the king's stores were embarked and sent off; that he wished to get away with the detachment next morning at day light, and requested me to send an officer that day as early as possible.

"In consequence of this information and request, I instantly dispatched an officer; and next day (being the 14th) followed with the troops and two field pieces. On my arrival found the British garrison gone and Lieut. Elmer in possession of the fort. Immediately I landed the detachment and artillery and marched in, the music playing the President's march; and under a federal salute, displayed the flag of the United States from the citadel.

"With pleasure I mention that the British commandant left the barracks and every other building clean, and in the best order they would admit of: and we feel ourselves much indebted to Capt. Clerk and Lieut. Fothergill, for the excellent order in which they left their gardens filled with vegetables and fruit."

What think you of the Treaty now?

Had ten thousand men been employed in besieging the Western Posts—had one-half of them fallen by sickness and the sword, during the siege—had one half the residue been sacrificed in carrying the works by storm, the acquisition would have excited universal joy and triumph throughout the United States. Bonfires, &c. &c. &c. would have been exhibited, and the sad tale of slaughtered thousands would have been drowned in shouts of applause to the surviving victors. The Posts are taken, and not one drop of blood shed! Eternal praises to the God of Peace and Negociation *, and thanks to his servants, the President, Vice-President, Messrs. Jay, Hamilton, Knox, Wolcot, and Pickering—thanks to the majority in both houses of Congress—and let all the people say AMEN.

* Come now and let us reason together saith the Lord.—Isaiah.

The alarm at Turin, on the approach of the French, was such as that the wife of the Pretender, the daughter of the King of Sardinia, and Madame d'Artois fled from the city. On the news of the Armistice, they returned; but would not be suffered to remain there after the Treaty.

FROM A HAMBURGH PAPER OF MAY 13.

Letter of the American Consul at Algiers, to the American Consul at Marseilles.

Algiers, April 5.

After many difficulties and anxiety, I have succeeded this day, to establish and to renew our treaty with the regency of Algiers: this long time I had almost despaired of effecting it. More particulars in my next.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at French town, to another in Balmore, dated the 5th inst.

"There is one or two men some where on their passage from Newcastle to Baltimore, with COUNTERFEIT DOLLARS; they are new, and it is supposed they have a large duantity; they came down in the water stage to Newcastle yesterday evening, where they passed some of their dollars and went off as soon as it was dark, before they could be discovered. Doctor Alexander wrote to me to have them taken, supposing they had come on in the stages, but I have discovered nothing of it with those passengers. It would be well if you will give information to some persons to attend to the passengers by land and water, by which means probably, they may be apprehended. They frequently call for drink, at taverns, and always give a Dollar to change for it."

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Cadiz to his friend in Gohasset, dated May 29th, 1796.

"You have doubtless been informed that the French have taken their headquarters in the palace of the king of Sardinia.

"From the northern frontiers we have had no information lately.

"The French fleet is still in this Bay, The English with two fleets, one in sight and the other at a little distance, are endeavoring to decoy the French.

"Our countrymen are not yet released from their confinement in Algiers—some difficulty arising respecting the payment of their ransoms—owing to the strict prohibitions of silver and gold from Spain."

DEBT OF GREAT BRITAIN.

A correspondent, who pretends to some knowledge in arithmetic, was musing the other day on the state of the national debt of England, which seems somewhat embarrassed. In spite of Mr. PITT's influence and even his bill on the freedom of thinking (as the same does not forbid our calculating) our correspondent has found the debt of Great Britain to amount to as many HALF DOLLARS as there have elapsed MINUTES since the creation of the world!
